Beauty and Virtue.

When wreathed in sweet visions, I fancifully replied,
Two heavenly young maidens pass by my side,
Adorned with the vestments which suited each best,
In vestments of beauty, and innocent dress.

BEAUTY.

The first, which was beauty, tript too lightly past,
Adorned with gay splendors of every cast;
Her mantle had trimmings of purple and gold,
And gems; yes the richest breast plate held.

While around her fair temples were rich flowing curls,
Entwined with bright flowers, and costliest pearls;
She seemed as sweet Venus—cannot tell why,
But mortals all bowed as the fair maid passed by.

VIRTUE.

And then came bright Virtue, enlivened with grace,
Which shied from temptation, in every place;
Her spirit was pure as the essence of love,
That floats through the ether in regions above.

Her soul beam'd as kindly and bright through her eyes,
As the sun ever shown from his azure tinged skies,
Her words flow'd so softly when'er they were given,
They fell on the soul like accents from Heaven.

My soul all in rapture, was fill'd with the sight,
Of this lovely, fair maiden with innocence bright;
And let as she pass'd where the Angels had met,
They, with admiration, bow'd low at her feet.

The Fate of a Drunkard.

BY DICKENS.

When the dim and misty light of a winter's morning penetrated into the narrow court, and struggled through the begrimed window of the wretched room, Warden awoke from his heavy sleep, and found himself alone. He arose and looked around him; the old flock mattress on the floor was undisturbed; everything was just as he remembered to have seen it last, and there was no sign of any one, save himself, having occupied the room during the night. He had inquired of the other lodgers and of the neighbors, but his daughter had not been seen or heard of. He rambled through the streets, and scrutinized each wretched face, among the crowds that thronged them, with anxious eyes. But his search was fruitless, and he returned to the garret when night came on, desolate and weary.

For many days he occupied himself in the same manner, but no traces of his daughter did he meet with, and no word of her reached his ears. At last he gave up the pursuit as hopeless, and long thought of the probability of her leaving him, and endeavoring to gain her bread in quiet elsewhere. She had left him at last to starve alone. He ground his teeth and cursed her.

He begged his bread from door to door. Every half-penny he could wring from the pity or credulity of those to whom he addressed himself was spent in the old way. A year passed over his head; the roof of a jail was the only one that had sheltered him for many months. He slept under arches in brick fields—anywhere where there was some warmth or shelter from the cold and rain. But, in the last stage of poverty, disease, and houseless want, he was a drunkard still.

At last, one bitter night, he sunk down on a door-step, faint and ill. The premature decay of vice and profligacy had worn him to the bone. His cheeks were hollow and livid; his eyes were sunken, and their sight was dim. His legs trembled beneath his weight, and a cold shiver ran through every limb.

And now the long forgotten scenes of a misspent life crowded thick and fast upon him. He thought of the time he had a home, a happy, cheerful home—and of those who peopled it, and flocked about him then, until the forms of his elder children seemed to rise up from the grave and stand about him—so plain, so clear, and so distinct they were, that he could touch and feel them. Looks, that he had long forgotten, were fixed upon him, once more; voices, long since hushed in death, sounded in his ears like the music of village bells. But it was only for an instant.—The rain beat heavily upon him; and cold and hunger were gnawing at his heart again.

He rose and dragged his feeble limbs a few paces further. The street was silent and empty—the few passers by, at that late hour, hurried quickly on, and his tremulous voice was lost in the violence of the storm. The heavy chill again struck through his frame, and his blood seemed to stagnate beneath it. He coiled himself up in a projecting doorway and tried to sleep.

But sleep had fled from his dull and glazed eyes. His mind wandered strangely, but he was awake and conscious. The well known shout of drunken mirth sounded in his ear—the glass was at his lips—the board was covered with rich food—they were before him, he could see them all—he had but to reach his hand and take them—and thought the illusion was

A Game of Brag.

"Talk about your darned fast lines," said a Yankee to a Cockney, who was so imprudent, in the natural way of his countrymen, to commence bragging on English railroads, while the couple were progressing at the rates of forty miles an hour on the Birmingham railway. "Why mister, this ere road is purty considerable for England, but it won't do 'Meriky. We ride a straddle o' telegraphs there, when we'er in a hurry, but when we ain't we take the railroad. I was comin' from Philadelphia to New York, when I ses to a feller settin' by me—who on airth owns that big garden with white palins around it?"

"I don't see no white palins," ses he. "I don't see nothin' else," ses I, "and a mighty tall fence it is too." "The feller burst out a laffin—"why, you darned fool," ses he, "them's the telegraph poles." And sure enough, when the engine feller stopped, I saw them posts a hundred feet apart, and we had been going so all-fired fast, they looked for all the world like white palins."

At this moment the bell rang at a signal station, before the Cockney had fully recovered from Jonathan's last dose.

"What's that bell ringin' for?" inquired the latter of his English friend.

"We are approaching D—,"

"Well, them kind of bell flinxs does for these ere slow cars but, we can't use them here as contrivances in 'Meriky."

"Ah, why not?"

"Travel too fast—fact, beat sound all to smash. We would be smack through a village before the sound of a clapper was in the neighborhood."

"My heyes! is it possible!" exclaimed the astonished Cockney.

"Fact, again, by thunder! Why, I was was on the York cars when them ere steam whistles were first tried. Maybe you've heern of the terrible accident?"

"No."

"Well, sir, we were going it strong. Hurrycaines were no whar—all natur seemed shakin' to pieces, when, several miles off, something was seen on the track. The whistle was let loose, and she did scream awfully, but it was no manner of use, for after tumbling over a span of smart horses, and a big market wagon, I was just rising from a pond, when along come the whistle holler, mused up with some big cusses, I mind to have heern the engine man rip out when he first saw the wagon. But the poor feller was dead when his voice arrived. Fact got the documents."

"Extraordinary!" exclaimed the horror-stricken Cockney. "And do you use whistles yet?"

"Bless your soul, no. Congress stopped them right off, and now we act on the philosophic principles, that light travels an all-fired sight faster than sound, which will do, perhaps, for this generation. We now tell 'em we are cummin' by bursting out a light that astonishes all creation, and I reckon rather surprised the planetary system at first. When it was tried at night, the roosters on the road commenced crowing, and the chickens all got down from their roost, thinking it was daylight."

The cars suddenly stopped, when Jonathan, having arrived at the point of his destination, looked around at the astonished Cockney, nodded his head, and taking his carpet bag under one arm, and an umbrella under the other, took his leave as sober as a deacon.

A WOMAN'S DESERT.—The following illustrative idea of what a desert is in female mind is extracted from a novel entitled "Marriage."

Douglas saw the storm gathering on the brow of his capricious wife, and clasping her in his arms:

"Are you indeed so changed, my Julia, that you have forgot the time when you used to declare you would prefer a desert with your Henry, to a throne with another?"

"No, certainly, not changed; but—I—I did not then know what a desert was: or at least, I had formed rather a different idea of it."

"What was your idea of a desert?" said her husband, laughing; "do tell me, love."

"Oh, I had fancied it a beautiful place, full of roses and myrtles, and smooth green turf, and murmuring rivulets, and though very retired, not absolutely out of the world, where one could occasionally see one's friends and give debauches and fete champetres."

Those who are the loudest in their threats, are the weakest in the execution of them. In springing a mine, that which has done the most extensive mischief makes the smallest report; and again, if we consider the effect of lightning, it is probable that he that is killed by it, hears no noise; but the thunderclap which follows, and which most alarms the ignorant, is the surest proof of their safety.

"Shall we take a 'bus up Broadway," said a young New Yorker, who was showing his country cousin the wonders of the city.

"O, dear, no!" said the frightened girl. "I would not do that in the street!"

An Auction Scene

Strolling through our city, we chanced into an auction-room to see what bargains we could make. The auctioneer was on the stand with a piece of calico.

"Eight cents a yard," was bid.

"I'll give you ten," says another.

"Going at ten! Going! gone. Yours, madam; walk in and settle."

"I didn't bid on it," exclaimed the old lady, advancing.

"We'll thank persons not to bid if they don't want an article," said the auctioneer.

"Going then, at eight! Who says more than eight?"

"Nine cents," said an old gentleman opposite.

"Nine! nine! Who says ten? Going at nine! Going, gone! Yours, sir. Cash takes it at nine cent."

"I didn't bid," said the gentleman. I don't want it; I wouldn't give five cents for the whole piece."

(Auctioneer getting mad.) "If any one bids again, they will have to take the article, or get into trouble." (Throwing down angrily the piece of calico.) Give me something else. Ah, gentlemen, here is a fine piece of diaper! What can I get for this? Anything you please."

"I'll start it at five."

"Ten," says another.

"Twelve-and-a-half," says a third.

"Thirteen," cries an old lady.

"Fourteen, fifteen," cried several voices.

"Fifteen, I am offered; fifteen—done at fifteen! Can't dwell! going! g-o-i-n-g! gone! Yours, sir. Step up, whoever bid."

No one came; all eyes staring in various parts of the room.

"Going, then, as fourteen! Yours, sir, walk up here."

But the bidder could not be made to walk up.

"Thirteen, then, madam; you can have it at your bid."

"I didn't bid. What do you think I want of that article?" said the old lady, indignantly.

"Here, I'll take it at thirteen," exclaimed a voice at the other end of the room. All eyes were turned in that direction but no claimant stepped forward.

"Who says they'll take it at thirteen?"

"I do," said an old fat faced farmer.

"Well, sir, walk up and take it."

"I'm afraid it's stolen goods! says the fat faced man."

The auctioneer, now quite mad, sprang down, and was about to collar the old man, when a person right behind him cried,

"Don't strike him! I was me that said you stole them."

The auctioneer turned round, when a big dog apparently right at his heels, snuffed and barked most furiously. With a sudden spring upon his counter, he ordered the crowd to leave. An acquaintance at our elbow, no longer able to control himself, burst into a loud laugh, as a gentle little man passed out at the door whom he told us was Blitz, the ventriloquist.—Cin. Enquirer.

A Fairy Wife.

A merchant married a Fairy. He was so manly, so earnest, so energetic, and so loving, that her heart was constrained towards him, and she gave up her heritage in Fairyland to accept the lot of woman.

They were married; they were happy; and the early months glided away like the vanishing pageantry of a dream.

Before the year was over, he had returned to his affairs; they were important and pressing, and occupied more and more of his time. But every evening as he hastened back to her side, she felt the weariness of absence more than repaid by the delight of his presence. She sat at his feet and sang to him, and prattled away the remnant of care that lingered on his mind.

But his cares multiplied. The business of many families depended on him. His affairs were vast and complicated, and they kept him longer away from her. All the day, while he was amidst his sales of merchandise, she roamed along the banks of a sequestered stream, weaving bright fancy pageantries, or devising airy gaudies, with which to charm his troubled spirit. A bright and sunny being, she comprehended nothing of care. Life was abounding in her; she knew not the disease of reflection; she felt not the perplexities of life. To sing and to laugh; to leap the stream and beckon him to leap after her, as he use in the old lover days, when she would conceal herself from him in the folds of a water-lily; to tantalize and enchant him with a thousand capricious coquetries—this was her idea of how they should live; and when he gently refused to join her in these childlike gambols, and told her of the serious work that awaited him, she raised her soft blue eyes to him baby wonderment, not comprehending what he meant, but acquiescing, with a sigh; because he said it.

She acquiesced, but a soft sadness fell upon her. Life to her was love, and nothing more. A soft sadness also fell upon him. Life to him was love, and something more; and he saw with regret that she did not comprehend it. The wall of care, raised by busy hands, was gradually shutting him out from her. If she visited him during the day, she found herself a hindrance, and retired. When he came to her a sunset, he came pre-occupied. She sat at his feet, loving his anxious face. He raised tenderly the golden ripple of loveliness that fell in ringlets on her neck, and kissed her soft, beseeching eyes; but there was something in his eyes a remote look as if his soul were afar, busy with other things, which made her little heart almost burst with uncomprehended jealousy.

She would steal up to him at times, when he was absorbed in calculation, and throwing her arms around his neck, woo him from his thought. A smile, revealing love in its very depth, would brighten his anxious face, as for a moment he pushed aside the world, and concentrated all his being on one happy feeling.

She could win moments from him—she could not win his life; she could charm, she could not occupy him! The painful truth came slowly over her, as the deepening shadows fell upon a sunny day until at last it was night; night with her stars of infinite beauty, but without the lustre and warmth of day.

She drooped; and on her couch of sickness her keen sighted love perceived, through all his ineffable tenderness, that same remoteness in his eyes, which proved that, even as he sat there, grieving and apparently absorbed in her there still came dim remembrances of care to vex and occupy his soul.

"It were better I were dead," she thought; "I am not good enough for him." Poor child! Not good enough, because her simple nature knew not the manifold perplexities, the hindrances of incomplete life! Not good enough, because her whole life was centred in one whose life was scattered!

And so she breathed herself away, and left her husband to all his gloom of care, made tenfold darker by the absence of those gleams of tenderness which before had fully irradiated life.—The night was starless, and he alone.—London Leader.

Bar Fixing.

Say, entire stranger, would you like to know how I fix them bars in Arkansas. It's a caution to see me trap the tarnal creatures. I reckon there ain't much bar left in my part of the country, so I'm a point further West this fall, a drivin the darned animals afore me.

There was one bar as fell down dead when he heern my name, it had such effect on the brute's nervous system. I specklate that bar must have been the victim of an unfortunate attachment, or he never would have been so ungodly sentimental.

This was how I fixed it.

I got an old cask—a big 'un. I swapped a pig for it to Irish Billy. I calculate that pig w'n't a very long lived 'un. He swallowed a boat with an iron rim, and all the hobnails in it, and got an indigestion. Howsomever that ain't niether her nor thar.

I got the cask and some bits of iron, and I fixed it nicely with spikes all around so that any bar could get into it, but all the bar in creation could not get out when they was once mabbed in it. I used 'em grin at the unfortunate animals through a hole in the tub's bottom, and in they cum with a rush, and I had nothing to do but to walk round and stick 'em in the spinal marrow, which is a settler for most beasts and beastesses in this world, I take it.

Talk of a tale of a tub, I could tell tales of that 'ere cask till the clock was used up, and the stars wanted more burnin fluid!—N. Y. Pick.

ANECDOTE—A FACT.—A young man was seen to enter a church in the time of service. He paused at the entrance, the congregation started, he advanced a few steps, and deliberately surveying the whole assembly, commenced a slow march up the broad aisle—not a pew was opened—the audience were too busy for civility—he wheeled, and in the same manner performed a march, stepping as it were to Roslin Castle, in the dead march of Saul, and disappeared. A few minutes after, he re-entered with a large block upon his shoulder, as much as he could well stagger under; his countenance immovable. Again the good people stared, and half rose from their seats, with their books in their hands. At length he placed the block in the very centre of the principal passage, and seated himself upon it.—Then for the first time the reproach was felt. Every pew door in the house was instantly thrown open. But no, the stranger was a gentleman—he came not there for disturbance—he moved not, smiled not; but preserved the utmost decorum until the service was concluded; when he deliberately shouldered his block, and to the same slow step, bore it off, and replaced it where he had found it. The congregation is now the most attentive and polite to strangers of any in America.—Balt. Paper.

A dentist presented a bill for the tenth time to a rich skin flint. "It strikes me," said the latter, "that this is a pretty round bill."

"Yes," replied the dentist, "I've sent it round often enough to make it appear so, and I have called now to get it squared."

LEBANON, KY.,

Wednesday Morning, Oct. 27, 1852

Remember;

That from and after the 30th of Sept. that the Lebanon Post can be sent to any post office in this county free of postage; and to any post office in the State at the low rate of 3¢ per quarter, or 13 cents the year. Now who will not subscribe to their own paper?

Come up and subscribe for the Post, and get your friends and neighbors to subscribe. We have not near got a living list yet. Remember, also, that we propose to send it to clubs of 10 for $15, or $1.50 to each subscriber; or to clubs of 20 for $25, or $1.25 to each subscriber. Clubs must be paid for in advance. We make no boasts about our paper, but we are willing to let it sink or swim on its own merits or demerits. If you do not like our paper do not take it, but do not say: "I like the paper very well, and would be very glad to see it continue," and then turn right around and borrow your neighbor's paper.

We have discovered a vast amount of indigent poverty, since our sojourn in this county; men who no one would suspect of being "hard run;" who, in fact are reputed wealthy; and yet, astonishing to relate, they are not able to take their own paper! We would go in to levy a penny tax to support such men.

The Barbecue.

On last Saturday, there was a Whig Barbecue in this place. There was a pretty large crowd in attendance, and there was the most quiet and excellent order maintained throughout the entire time. An abundance even to superfluity, of the best and well cooked victuals provided; and every one present done ample justice to them. The ladies too, graced the ground with their presence in goodly numbers, which added no little to the pleasure of the occasion.

After every one had ate to repletion, they assembled in front of the platform, and were addressed by the Hon. C. S. MOREHEAD, Whig Elector for the State at Large, in behalf of the claims of GEN. SCOTT, to the Presidency. The Hon. gentleman is a smooth, efficient, forcible and eloquent speaker, and held his audience enchained for over two hours. His description of GEN. SCOTT's military career was peculiarly eloquent.

The crowd, although large, was not so great, as it would have been, we presume, on account of the panic which has existed in reference to the cholera being in the Eastern part of the county.

The Pole Raising.

On last Monday, there was a fine PIERCE and KING Pole raised in this place. The length of the pole above ground, is 128 feet. At the extreme top, there floats a very pretty streamer, made of red, white and blue silk, by the Miss S's. and Mrs. K., for which we are requested to tender the thanks of the Democracy of Marion county. At half past eleven o'clock, all things having been made ready, with "a long pull and a strong pull, and all pull together," the pole arose majestically into an upright position. Owing to some of the ropes breaking, there was some fears expressed of its falling. When it reached the perpendicular, Messrs. SEARS, MILBURN and SPEARS, performed a very handsome air on two brass instruments and the bass drum. These gentlemen reside in Springfield, and volunteered their services, for the occasion, and for which, we are authorized to tender the thanks of the Democracy.

At 1 o'clock a splendid Pierce and King flag was run up, and its ample folds given to the breeze. When it started up the band struck up "The Star Spangled Banner."

After dinner the crowd assembled in the Court House yard, and were very eloquently addressed by GEN. PITCHER. The General's speech was very forcible, entertaining, and argumentative—that is as much of it as we could find time to hear. There were a number of the fairer portion of creation present, both at the pole raising and at the speech.

At early candle light, Col. C. SMEDLEY addressed a large audience, in the Court House, in behalf of the claims of General PIERCE. Not being able to hear the gentleman, we can say nothing as to the merits or demerits of his effort.

"Indian Summer" is at hand.

We see that several of our exchanges are letting down on our County Court, about their refusing to issue a writ of election, for the people to say, by their votes, and according to the prerogative granted to them by their new Constitution, whether they would tax themselves to build a rail road. That is right pass them around, for it may be their last chance to get notoriety. We understand that Prentice of the Louisville Journal, makes a small portion of political capital out of it. He has been misinformed, for there were Whigs as well as Democrats upon the bench. But we cannot expect anything else from a political editor just at this time, be he Whig or Democrat. Both parties are catching at everything.

The vote was taken in Taylor Co. on Saturday last, upon the rail road tax. We understand that the tax was carried by a majority of some 250 votes. Huzzah for Taylor. Will this county follow suit, when she gets a chance?

We hear that there will be another petition presented to the County Court of this county praying it to issue a writ of election, on the Rail Road Tax. We feel confident that there will be a large majority of the voters of this County, who will cast their votes for the tax. We understand that the vote will be taken exclusively for the LOUISVILLE AND LEBANON RAILROAD and not for both of the routes in contemplation.

The petition will be presented on next Monday, it being the regular County Court day. We wish this petition better luck than befel its predecessor.

Mrs. CHANDLER sent us a fine large sweet potato, on last week, weighing 34 pounds. We thank her for the present and admire its dimensions.

Another.—Mr. Bowman, on seeing the above potato; sent us another, weighing 34 pounds. It is very ungallant of Mr. B. to get ahead of the ladies; but, we presume, he thinks it fair.

Huzzah for Marion County! it can beat any other, for fair ladies, large vegetables, tough beef and tougher Justices of the Peace.

There will be a large pole raised by the Whigs of this county, on next Saturday the 30th of this month, in Lebanon. A full attendance is desired to "pull at the ropes."

In our advertising column will be seen the advertisement of Mr. F. LAWREY. He has brought to our place, from time to time, some of the most beautiful as well as well made Carriages as we have ever seen. He has sold carriages to the gentlemen cited as reference, and his work has given entire satisfaction. Those who wish to purchase carriages or buggies would do well to give Mr. L. a call, as he sells on reasonable terms. He is now in town.

Mr. WM. AKIN was in our town on last Saturday, and in the evening, he gave an exhibition of his Trinitropic, or dissolving views. We were very much entertained by the exhibition. Mr. A., in his travels around the State, came across a natural curiosity in the form of a young and ignorant lad, in Russell County, who is a natural mathematician! The boy is but eight years of age and scarcely knows one letter from another, and who does not know one figure from another, and yet is a very expert arithmetician. We tried him in private and in public, and found him wonderfully quick. For instance, we asked him how much was 44 times 55, and before we could jot down the figures, he looked up and answered "Twenty-four hundred and twenty." We merely give this as an example, to show his wonderful and unaccountable power. The name of the boy is V. B. Stanton, and his parents are poor and obscure people, now living in Russell county. He appears a very dull in every other thing but calculating.

We have received the November number of Godey's Lady's Book. It is a handsome number, and rather out Godey's.

Graham's Magazine for November has come to hand, and is, as usual a splendid number.

Blackwoods Magazine for October, lies before us. It contains its usual amount of excellent matter.

The present number, completes six months of the first volume of the Post. We have given fair and timely warning to those who have not paid their subscription, so that those who now have to pay $2.50, cannot have cause to grumble. By paying up shortly they can save themselves the trouble of paying $3.

The 4th of November next is the one hundredth anniversary of the initiation of George Washington into the order of Free Masons.

The coalition Democrats and Free-soilers have united on a senatorial ticket in Middlesex county. On national matters they stand on the platform while coalescing on the State ticket.

The Democrats of the 4th district nominated for Congress Chas. Chase Ewell, editor of the Boston Times.

The Free-soilers of the same district nominated for Congress Jno. A. Bolls, and in the 7th district Chas. F. Adams, son of John Quincy Adams.

The recent gales have destroyed a great amount of property.

The light-house keeper's dwelling at Breakwater was washed away, and not a boat left on the beach.

Wakulla bridge railroad building was destroyed, and the track washed up for half a mile.

The gales have had the most disastrous effect upon the cotton crop; not one bale to ten acres will be obtained.

Large numbers of turpentine trees have been destroyed.

At Tallahassee, every store between the capital and the court house was damaged and the road blocked up with fallid timber.

The gale was equally severe at Apalachicola.

A pilot-boat was lost at Cyprus Bank, and the captain and two men drowned.

The steamer Palmetto was totally wrecked.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 20.

Judge Grier, of the United States circuit Court, in the case of heirs of Stephen Girard, city of Philadelphia, charged the jury yesterday in favor of the heirs who claim eleven tracks of land in Schuylkill county, valued at $110,000; that when Girard's will was made he did not own the entire title to the land, and therefore the will was inoperative. The jury rendered a verdict for the heirs. The case will probably go to the supreme court.

A committee of the citizens of Philadelphia met Gen. Scott at Tacony, at 11 A. M., and escorted him to the city. He will land at Southwark.—Salutes are being fired as the escort and cavalcade moves along to his quarters at the Girard House.

The Ross party experienced no molestation with Indians during the trip.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 22.

A bloody affray occurred to-day. Geo. Zimmerman, a notorious pugilist, and Hugh Stone, a hack driver, had agreed to meet for the purpose of settling difficulties between them. The parties accompanied by numerous friends, met, but owing to the difficulties of arranging the details, Stone refused to fight. Zimmerman attacked when all hands drew pistols and knives. At this juncture Stone's brother Edward, drove up and seeing the perilous situation of his brother, jumped from his hack, drew a knife and stabbed Zimmerman to the heart, and wounding in the stomach a man named Muckleby.

Edward Stone then fled, but was soon arrested. Muckleby is reported dying.

SERIOUS ILLNESS OF DANIEL WEBSTER. At noon yesterday the telegraph advised of the serious illness of Hon. DAN'L WEBSTER, and stated the probability that he could not survive during the day. Last night the report stated he was better, and we indulge a strong hope that this great man will be longer spared to his country. It will be observed that in obedience to the wishes of Mr. Webster and his relatives, his friends in Massachusetts have withdrawn his name from all connection with the Presidential election.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 22.

George Zimmerman was stabbed to the heart this evening by Edward Swan, a hack driver, in revenge for a brutal assault upon him a year ago by Zimmerman.

Several plans have been suggested, and some of them partially acted on, to raise funds for the purpose of constructing a great National Monument to the memory of Washington, the Father of his Country. But with all the efforts that have been made, this massive structure now in process of erection at the National Capitol, still lingers in its upward progress, from the want of means necessary to prosecute the work with vigor and success.

Now, by means of the following simple scheme, if generally adopted and carried out in good faith, it is confidently believed that an amount of funds adequate to complete the Monument, may be secured in a single day.

Let the judges of elections on the second day of November next, provide, at the respective polls throughout the United States, a contribution box inscribed "Monument Fund," in which each voter be requested to deposit a dime, (or whatever sum he may choose) as a free-will offering towards completing this noble shaft pointing to heaven in lasting remembrance, alike of the illustrious dead, and of the gratitude of a free and independent people.

To demonstrate the happy result of the foregoing suggestions, if duly attended to in every portion of the Union, it is sufficient to state the fact, that there are upwards of three millions of voters in the United States, which at a dime a head will yield, in round numbers, the handsome sum of three hundred thousand dollars—a sum, deemed amply sufficient to place the cap stone on this magnificent column—this enkindling monument of a nation's gratitude to the nation's most illustrious benefactor. COLUMBIA.

We ask particular attention to the following:—

The New York Times says:

Mr. Webster.

We have reason to know that while Mr. Webster is not so ill as some of the current rumors would imply, the statement that his health is as good as usual is incorrect. Mr. Webster, in addition to his ailment of the season, has had a severe attack of indigestion, for the last two or three weeks, which has confined him to a very low diet, and considerably impaired his strength. He is able, nevertheless, to continue about his room, and occasionally to walk out; his correspondence receives his usual attention.

We have reason to believe, furthermore, that a letter from him will be published within a day or two, upon the Presidential canvass, in which he will no longer leave his position as a Whig to the mercy of misconstruction.

Daniel Webster.

Another of the great statesmen of the country is gone to his rest. We see with sadness one light after another going out. The successors of the first statesmen of the first statesman of the Republic are giving away to another generation. They have had a glorious history, now nearly finished. Whatever difference once existed between the deceased and a large portion of his countrymen, his name is now the property of the Union. It is to be hoped that his adherence to the constitution of his country in his later years, will not be lost upon the Union.

Last night the bells of this city tolled in commemoration of the event. To-day, we understand, the city council will meet and take some action suited to the occasion, and to-night a mass meeting will be held at the court house. We trust there will be a general attendance of all parties.

Lou. Dem. 26th.

—A boy died in Cleveland, Ohio, a few days ago from eating too great a quantity of chestnuts.

THE FATE OF GENIUS.—An English gentleman who lately edited one of the most popular weekly papers in Boston, was conveyed to the Lunatic Asylum, in that city on Wednesday of last week a raving maniac.

—Three hundred Swedish immigrants arrived at Boston last week from Gottemberg, and left immediately for the West, where they settle as farmers.

—Not less than 50,000 barrels fish will be shipped this year from a single district in the South end of Lake Michigan. Value $230,000.

—On Tuesday of last week, the ship Geo. Raynes sailed from Boston, with 92 passengers, and a cargo of 900 tons of ice.

—Since the 15th of June there have been 454 deaths from Cholera at Rochester, New York.

—A Webster torch-light procession in Boston, was largely attended on Wednesday night.

—The cholera has appeared at Wheeling, and seven deaths have occurred.

HEAVY RECEIPTS.—The receipts of cotton at New Orleans, on the 11th inst., by up river steamers, amounted to 20,120 bales.

—A most disgraceful riot occurred at Baltimore, during the election on the 13th. The rioters (about fifty) were armed with clubs and revolvers, and resisted all the officers' attempts to arrest them. They attempted to prevent the voting at the polls but did not succeed.

Special Notices.

"DIGEST!" Such is the true meaning of the word "Pepsin," or of the two Greek words from which it is derived. This is the significant and appropriate title of the True Digestive Fluid or Gastric Juice, prepared by Dr. J. S. Houghton, of Philadelphia, from the fourth stomach of the Ox, for the cure of Indigestion and Dyspepsia. It is Nature's own remedy for an unhealthy stomach. No art of man can equal its curative powers. It renders good eating perfectly consistent with health. See advertisement in another part of the paper.

WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY imparts new vigor to vital action, and relieves the system by opening the pores of the skin, and promoting the secretion of mucus matter. Its action is sudorific, sedative and expectorant, by opening the pores, allaying irritation, and by rendering the expulsion of mucus matter easy.

Those who take the Balsam will feel immediate relief from the distressing irritations that accompany affections of the respiratory organs. The pores have been closed, the Balsam opens them. The lungs suffer from irritation, the irritation is soothed; the pulse is violent and feverish, they are softened, and the mucus membrane is relieved of its engorgement with rapidity and ease. All by the use of this delightful remedy.

Another Scientific Wonder.

GREAT CURE FOR

DYSPEPSIA!

DR. J. S. HOUGHTON'S

PEPSIN,

THE TRUE

DIGESTIVE FLUID,

OR

GASTRIC JUICE!

Prepared from Rennet, or the Fourth Stomach of the Ox, after directions of Baron Liebig, the great Physiologist and Chemist, by J. S. HOUGHTON, M.D., Philadelphia, Pa. "DIGEST!" Such is the true meaning of the word PEPsin. It is the chief element, or great Digesting Principle of the Gastric Juice, the Solvent of the Food, the Purifying, Preserving and Stimulating Agent of the Stomach and Intestines. It is extracted from the Digestive Stomach of the Ox, thus forming a true Digestive Fluid, precise like the natural Gastric Juice in its chemical powers, and furnishing a complete and perfect substitute for it.

This is Nature's own Remedy for an unhealthy Stomach. No art of man can equal its curative powers. It contains no Alcohol, Bitters, Acids, or Nauseous Drugs. It is extremely agreeable to the taste, and may be taken by the most feeble patients who cannot eat a water cracker without acute distress. Beware of Drugged Imitations. Pepsin is not a Drug. Half a teaspoonful of Pepsin infused in water, will digest or dissolve five pounds of Roast Beef in about two hours, out of the stomach.

Scientific Evidence.

The Scientific Evidence upon which this Remedy is based is in the highest degree curious and remarkable. Call on the Agent and get a Descriptive Circular, gratis, giving a large amount of scientific evidence, from Leibig's Animal Chemistry; Dr. Combe's Physiology of Digestion; Dr. Pereira on Food and Diet; Dr. John W. Draper of New York University; Prof. Duglison's Physiology; Prof. Silliman, of Yale College; Dr. Carpenter's Physiology; &c., together with reports of cures from all parts of the United States.

Pepsin in Fluid and Powder.

DR. HOUGHTON'S PEPSIN is prepared in powder and in Fluid form—and in prescription vials for the use of Physicians. The powder will be sent by mail free of Postage, for one dollar sent to Dr. Houghton, Philadelphia. "OBSERVE THIS!" Every bottle of the genuine Pepsin bears the written signature of J. S. HOUGHTON, M.D., sole proprietor, Philadelphia Pa. Copy-right and Trade mark secured.

Sold by all Druggists and dealers in Medicine. Price ONE DOLLAR per bottle.

THE LEBANON POST.

Enough has been said and wrote upon the innumerable advantages arising out of having a newspaper in a County; I will not, therefore, enlarge upon this point. Feeling convinced that the people of Marion wish an establishment of the kind in their county, I have consented, after many solicitations, to make a trial; let us see what will be the result. I had partially made my arrangements to move upon the Ohio river, but if the people of Marion will show, by subscribing liberally for the "POST," that they want a paper, we will succumb to their wishes, and settle amongst them.

THE POST, will be strictly NEUTRAL in Politics and Religion, in all things else perfectly INDEPENDENT; expressing freely the views of the Editor and his Correspondents, on the passing events of the day, local matters, &c. I am decidedly in favor of Railroad communication in Kentucky, being firmly convinced that in that way alone, can our beloved State keep up with the advancement of the age and her older Sister-States. I am particularly in favor of a communication of this kind across the State, and thus giving us a direct intercourse with the great southern mart; being convinced that such an intercourse would redound to the benefit of all classes, and that the proposed route through Marion County is the best location in the State, and believe firmly that it can and will be run. We will advocate, conditionally, to the best of our ability, this truly beneficial enterprise and solicit the pens of others.

THE POST, will be dedicated to News, Agriculture, Tales, Poetry, Anecdotes, &c., &c. Nothing shall appear in its columns of a hurtful or demoralizing tendency to the mind; in a word, it shall be a FAMILY NEWSPAPER.

THE POST, will be issued weekly, on every Wednesday, on an imperial sheet at $2 per year in advance, $2.50 if paid in six months, or $3 if the payment is delayed until the end of the year. Wishing to commence on the last of April or the first of May, I would be gratified to receive all of my prospectuses, crowded with names before that time.

This Literary Institution, founded in 1851, by the late Rev. WILLIAM BYRNE, and subsequently conducted for many years by the Jesuits, is now under the superintendence of the Right Rev. Bishop of Louisville, who will always take means to provide a suitable Faculty for carrying it on with a view to promote the greatest public good. Under the auspices of its previous conductors, the Institution has been instrumental in widely diffusing the blessings of a religious education throughout Kentucky and the adjoining States.—The steadiness of its patronage has been Original Poetry.

For the Lebanon Post. Nothing Sure but Heaven.

This earth is changing every day,
Its solid structures melting away,
Its yielding masses glide and flow,
From mountains to the waves below;
There's nothing firm but Heaven.

The flowery carpet of the spring,
So bright and gay—a charming thing;
In summers sun with beaming ray,
Will fade and wither in a day;
There's nothing bright but Heaven.

The starry skies above our head,
Alike, are to destruction wed;
The sun will fade, the stars decay,
And time, and nature pass away.
There'll nothing last but Heaven.

Then, O, my soul! arise and see,
These glittering things, how false they be,
Thine own immortal life make sure;
Obey thy God, and heaven secure;
That firm, bright, lasting Heaven.

Miscellaneous.

Practicing for the Voyage.

A short time since, some gentlemen cruising on a part of the Irish coast, observing that about the same hour every day, a boat, containing two men and a woman, took its passengers from the shore and after a short time returned with them inquired the reason for this early excursion.

"My man," said he, "what makes you come here every day? Is it that you like it?"

"Oh, your honors not all," was the reply
"but faith, your honors, me wife and me's going out to Australia, and so we are just practicing the say-sickness, that we may be use to it when we start."

"Well do you find yourself improving?"

"Ah, sure, your honors, me wife's sick ever day, but she's getting on purtly any how."

So the worthy couple were left to qualify themselves for emigration by practising the say-sickness.

A newly imported Irishman was standing with his hook under his arm, at a shop window in Glasgow. The shopkeeper ac-costs him thus:

"Well Pat, what do you want in my line to-day?"

"What you have not got to give me," rejoins the Irishman.

"I will wagger a shilling I have what suits you?"

The latter, pulling a shilling from his pocket, replies, "Its done. I want a sheath for my hook."

To poor Pat's astonishment and mortification the sheath was produced. Away he went to the harvest, however, leaving the shilling with the shopkeeper. But not to be beat he called on his way home, and in the presence of a witness thus addressed him:

"What will you take for as much twist tobacco as will reach from one of my ears to the other?"

"A penny," was the reply.

This being agreed to, the grocer cut off about a foot of twist tobacco, and was about to apply its extremities to Pat's ears, when the latter pointing his finger upward exultingly exclaimed:

"There is one ear, but the other is nailed to the back of the goal door in Dublin.
The duped grocer was obliged to give his ingenious antagonist forty pounds of tobacco before he could get quit of him.

"When you go out to drown yourself, always pull off your clothes; they may fit your husband's second wife."

That a profound remark; Solomon's about somewhere! When a widower marries, don't he take the bran new Kidderminster carpet (that "Eliza" was so choice of) to floor the attic? and is Brussels or Tapistry ever found too good for No. 2?

"Fit the second wife!" Aint her old trunk bro't down some rainy day and disembowelled to make dolls' dresses for little visitors? Don't her broaches and finger-rings sparkle on the hands of the cook and chambermaid? Isn't her daguerretype in the shoe-drawer in the closet?

Don't her parasol shade the ebony face of her weekly washerwoman? Don't her old letters make excellent "kindling" for the fire, after they have been perused by the servants? Don't the old beggar woman get the "cold shoulder," instead of "cold victuals," when she grows garrulous about her "dear deceased missus?" Wasn't the latter a "harmless, amiable, good little woman in her way, but cold in her temperament, and afflicted with the neuralgia?" and don't the rejuvenized widower (as he says this) look unutterable things at the rosy-cheeked, buxum young damsel at his side, who is secretly wondering whether that's the way she shall be served up to No. 3!

CHOLERA.—There was another outbreak of cholera last Saturday night. There have been five deaths since the last number of our paper was issued, making in all thirteen from the first breaking out of the disease. There have been no new cases very lately, and we trust the scourge has taken its final departure.

SOMETHING NEW.—The county court of Marion county, in this State, have refused the citizens of the county the privilege of voting for or against the Railroad tax!
This is something new and novel.

Lou. Cour. 16th.

If men praise your efforts, suspect their judgment; if they censure them, your own.

Be Forgiving.

"Greater is he who ruleth his spirit, than he who taketh a city."

"Come here sir!" said a strong, athletic man, as he seized a delicate looking lad by the shoulder. "You've been in the water again, sir! Haven't I forbidden it?"

"Yes, father, but—"

"No 'buts'! Haven't I forbidden it—hey?"

"Yes, sir. I was—"

"No reply, sir!" And the blows fell like a hail-storm about the child's head and shoulders.

Not a tear started from Harry's eye,
his face was deadly pale, and his lips firmly compressed, as he rose and looked at his father with an unflinching eye.

"Go to your room, sir, and stay there till you are sent for! I'll master that spirit of yours before you are many days older."

Ten minutes after, Harry's door opened, and his mother glided gently in. She was a fragile delicate woman, with mournful blue eyes, and temples startingly transparent. Laying her hand softly upon Harry's head, she stooped and kissed his forehead.

The rock was toughed, and the waters gushed forth.

"Dear mother!" said the weeping boy.
"Why didn't you tell your father that you plunged into the water to save the life of your playmate?"

"Did he give me a chance?" said Harry, springing to his feet, with a flashing eye.
"Didn't he twice bid me be silent, when I tried to explain? Mother, he's a tyrant to you and to me!"

"Harry, he's my husband and your father!"

"Yes, and I'm sorry for it. What have I ever had but blows and harsh words?
Look at your pale cheeks and sunken eyes, mother! It's too bad, I say; he's a tyrant mother," said the boy, with a clenched fist and set teeth, "and if it were not for you, I would have been leagues off long ago. And there's Nellie, too, poor, sick child! What good will all her medicine do her? She trembles like a leaf when she hears his footstep. I say, it's brutal, mother!"

"Harry!" (and a soft hand was laid on the boy's impetuous lips,) "for my sake—"

"Well, 'tis only for your sake—yours and poor Nellie's—or I should be on the sea somewhere—anywhere but here!"

Late that night Mary Lee stole to her boy's bedside, before retiring to rest.
"God be thanked, he sleeps," she murmured as she shaded her lamp from his face. Then kneeling at his bedside, she prayed for patience and wisdom to bear uncomplainingly the heavy cross under which her steps were faltering; and then —she prayed for him.

"No, no, not that!" said Harry, springing from his pillow, and throwing his arms about her neck; "I can forgive him what he has done to me, but I never will pray for what he has made you suffer; don't pray for him, at least don't let me hear it!"

Mary Lee was too wise to expostulate.
She knew her boy was spirit-sovereign under the sense of recent injustice; so she laid down beside him, and resting her head on his face, she murmured to him, "I will pray for you, and for all who are suffering."

"I will," he sobbed. "Mother, you are an angel; and if I ever get to heaven, it will be your hand that has led me there!"

There was a hurrying to and fro in Robert Lee's house, that night. It was a heavy hand that dealt those angry blows on that young head.

The passionate father's repentance came too late—came with the word that his boy must die!

"Be kind to her," said Harry, as his head drooped on his mother's shoulder.

It was a dearly bought lesson! Beside that lifeless corpse Robert Lee renewed his marriage vow; and now, when the hot blood of anger rises to his temples, and the hasty word springs to his lip, the pale face of the dead rises up between him and the offender, and an angel voice whispers—
"PEACE! BE STILL!"—Boston Olive B.

Tobacco.—Yesterday morning we had a heavy frost, and it now begins to look a little like fall of the year. Though the tobacco crop was planted late, it was all sowed before this frost, as the farmers were fearful it might come on them unaware. Early in the season it was believed by many that the crops of tobacco would be nearly a failure, but the seasonable weather since the middle of August has been so opportune that an average crop has been raised. We have heard some farmers pronounce this year's crop the best they ever grew though not so heavy, yet of a remarkable fine texture.

require the labor of four millions of men principal it would be necessary to levy a tax of ten dollars upon every inhabitant of the globe.

"Without indulging in a doubt of the truthfulness of 'Old Billy's' exploits among the Witches, or casting any direct reflections upon the professors of Mesmerism, Psychometry, or Biology; yet the Witch Doctor's career is described so graphically, and the parallel between his exploits and those of his more astute, but less original imitators of the Fox, Fish, and Sunderland school, that we think the Spirits of the latter will experience any thing but gratification in the book, and may, perchance, spell that most famous of all spells—when in a corner—

"The object of this work is to show the absurdity of the ultraisms of the past day, which have so largely occupied public credulity, and which, under the grab of science, have acquired a degree of influence wholly undeserved. The hit seems to be a most palpable one; and while the author thus cleverly shows up the modern imaginatives, he furnishes us an exceedingly interesting history of the early settlers of our own country. The picture is a most faithful one, and is presented in such an agreeable style, that it cannot fail to prove interesting to all classes of readers."—Western Lancet.
